Appendix 2

Words that go together

As well as explaining the meaning of a word, Oxford Wordpower also shows you how to use it correctly in a phrase or sentence.

The example sentences

Do we talk about weak cheese or mild cheese?

Do you say a joke or tell a joke? (It's mild and tell.)

If you look up a word in the dictionary, the example sentences show you which other words are often used with it:

Write out and cash are verbs that are often used with the word cheque.

cheque (US check) /tʃek/ noun [C,U] a piece of paper printed by a bank that you can fill in, sign and use to pay for things: She wrote out a cheque for £20. • I went to the bank to cash a cheque. • If there is no money in your account, your cheque will bounce (= your bank will not pay it). • Can I pay by cheque? صك أو شيك

Strong, high, cold and north are adjectives that are often used with the word wind.

wind<sup>1</sup> /wind/ noun 1 [C,U] (also the wind) air that is moving across the surface of the earth: There was a strong wind blowing. A gust of wind blew his hat off. high winds a cold north wind ريح

Appendix 3

Word formation

When you find a new word in English, what do you do? Look it up in a monolingual or a bilingual dictionary? Ask a teacher or another student? Try to predict the meaning from the rest of the paragraph – the context?

There is another way to try to simplify difficult words. Often, long words are made from shorter words that you know, combined with a few letters added to the beginning (a prefix) or to the end (a suffix). Look at the prefixes and suffixes (in dark type) above. They can all be used with many other words, so when you know their meaning, you have the key to a large number of new words.

These pages show you some important groups of prefixes and suffixes.

Prefixes

- 1 How many sides has an octagon?
  - 2 If 1991 was the bicentenary of Mozart's death, in which year did he die?
  - 3 Which word is a monosyllable?
but although however
  - 4 Does a multi-storey car park have more than one floor?
- 5 If a house was built in the postwar period, was it built before or after the war?
  - 6 Would a woman go to ante-natal classes before or after her baby was born?
  - 7 If your teacher told you to rewrite your essay, why would you be angry?
- 8 Which flies faster than the speed of sound, a subsonic plane or a supersonic plane?
  - 9 Is a micro-organism a very large or very small creature?
  - 10 How do you feel if you have overeaten – very full or still hungry?
- 11 Which of the prefixes un-, in-, im-, il-, ir- would you use to make the opposites of these words?
- |                |                |                 |                 |
|----------------|----------------|-----------------|-----------------|
| correct | certain | possible | regular  |
| sure    | legal   | valid    | relevant |
| patient | legible |                 |                 |
- 12 Is an activity that is extracurricular part of the curriculum of a school?
  - 13 Is a flight from London to New York transatlantic?

Numbers Many common words have prefixes that tell us about numbers.

A word that begins with bi- shows that there are two of something. A bicycle has two wheels (but a tricycle has three).

Words for measurements are often made with the prefixes cent-, kilo-, etc.

100 centimetres = 1 metre,
1 kilogram = 1000 grams, and so on.

Time A number of prefixes are connected with time, for example pre- (before) and ex- (former). A pre-arranged meeting was arranged beforehand. A divorced man might talk about his ex-wife. The ex-president is no longer president.

Size and degree Some common prefixes tell us 'how big' or 'how much'.

A word that begins with maxi- is large or the greatest; mini- refers to something small (eg mini-skirt, minibus).

Extra- means 'more' – extra-strong glue is stronger than usual.

Negative Many prefixes change the meaning of a word to its opposite or make it negative. A non-smoker does not smoke. The opposite of happy is unhappy.

Besides non- and un- we also use in- (or before certain letters im-, il- or ir-) in this way. It is important to learn which is the correct prefix to make the opposite of a word.

Position These prefixes tell us where something is or happens. For example, sub- gives the idea of 'under'. A subway goes under the road. We read the subtitles under the pictures of a foreign film.

Suffixes

A suffix is added to the end of a word, and it often changes the function of the word. There is one suffix that you probably use very often: -ly to make an adjective into an adverb.

He sings beautifully. The car was badly damaged.

A suffix can also be added to a noun to make it into an adjective.

You can change the noun Japan into an adjective describing the nationality of the people who live there by adding -ese: Japanese.

- 14 Use one of the suffixes -ation, -ment, -ness to make nouns from these verbs and adjectives:

develop	kind	arrange
imagine	happy	organize

What happens to the spelling of happy?

- 15 Fill the gaps to make words that describe people and their jobs:

- |   |                |
|---|----------------|
| a) works in a theatre                   | a _ _ or       |
| b) uses bricks and stone to make houses | b _ _ _ _ er   |
| a) stands in front of the orchestra     | c _ _ _ _ _ or |
| d) goes out to discover new countries   | e _ _ _ _ er   |

- 16 Which verbs can you make from these words using one of the suffixes -ize, -en and -ify? (You may need to change the spelling a little.)

magnet	beauty	sharp
general	loose	pure

- 17 Solve the clues to find these adjectives, which all end in one of the suffixes mentioned:

- practical, that can be used a lot
- having no friends
- easy to see or notice
- needing something to drink

To make nouns that describe a state, an action or a quality you can add a suffix such as -ation, eg:

inform + ation → information
examine + ation → examination

There may be small changes in the spelling, eg the second 'e' is dropped in examination.

Other suffixes are used to make nouns that describe people, for example: -er, -or, -ist, -ian, -ee, -ant, -ent. They may be added to a verb to describe the person who does that action, eg rider, sailor, typist, or we can add them to nouns to describe someone who works on a particular subject, eg artist, historian.

We can also make a noun or adjective into a verb by adding a suffix such as -ize, -en or -ify, eg:

modern → modernize wide → widen
simple → simplify

Adjectives can be made with many different suffixes. Some very common ones are:

-able (or sometimes -ible or just -ble), which often means 'possible to', eg acceptable, avoidable

-y and -ful, which often describe qualities, eg cloudy, helpful, beautiful

-less, which shows that something is missing, eg hopeless

Appendix 6

Modal verbs

Modal verbs are used with another verb to express possibility, probability, obligation, etc.

The modal verbs can, could, may, might, shall, should, will, would and must are followed by an infinitive without to: I can swim. These verbs do not change in form (ie they have no -ing, -ed or -s forms) and form questions and negatives without do:

'Can you hear me?' 'Yes, I can.'

Here are some examples of the use of modal verbs:

Ability

can could be able to

Can you ride a bike?

He has been able to swim for a year.

The fire brigade were able to rescue the children.

The fire brigade couldn't rescue the children.

I could run four kilometres without stopping when I was younger.

One day people will be able to travel to Mars.

She could have passed the exam if she'd tried harder.

- Look also at manage and succeed.

Obligation

must have (got) to

I must go to the bank today.

We have to give in the essay on Friday.

She had to wait for him.

We will have to ring up.

He didn't have to go to hospital. The test was done at home.

- Look also at need and suppose.

Duty

should ought to

The police should do something about it.

You shouldn't leave children alone.

You ought to visit your grandparents more often.

She oughtn't to make private calls in work time.

I shouldn't have gone to bed so late.

I felt very tired the next day.

I ought to have helped.

Permission

can could may

Can I go now, please?

You can't go swimming today. I need you to help me at home.

Books may only be borrowed for two weeks.

May I use your phone?

Could I possibly borrow your car?

- Look also at allow and let.

Prohibition

may not must not

---

You may not take photographs in the museum.

Cars must not park in front of the entrance.

- Look also at allow and let.

Recommendations and advice

must ought to should

---

You really must see that film. it's wonderful.

What ought I to say to him?

You ought to read this book.

You ought to have come with us. It was great!

He really shouldn't work so hard. He looks exhausted.

Requests

can could will would

Can you help me?

Could you open the door, please?

Will you sit down, please?

Would you come this way, please?

Suggestions and invitations

shall would like

---

Would you like to come with us?

Shall I carry that for you?

Shall we go out for a meal today?

- Look also at let.

Possibility

can could may might

I can catch a bus from here.

She could be famous one day.

Couldn't you come earlier?

I could have left my bag in the bank.

You may be right.

They may have forgotten the meeting.

William might be upstairs.

She might not come if she's very busy.

If I'd known the film was about Wales, I might have watched it.

Probability

can't must ought to should will

---

You can't be hungry – you've just eaten.

He couldn't have known that.

Have something to eat. You must be hungry.

I must have left my book at home.

It must have been a great shock for you.

That car must have been doing 100 miles an hour!

She ought to pass her test. She drives well.

I bought four bottles. That ought to have been enough.

He should have arrived by now. I'll ring and check.

That will be the postman.

Appendix 7

Phrasal verbs

Phrasal verbs are verbs that consist of two (or three) parts – an ordinary verb and another word (or words) like in, for, or off. They are very common in English. Here are some examples:

lie down   give up   look for   get on with

Some of them are easy to understand (you can guess the meaning of lie down if you know the words lie and down), but many phrasal verbs are more difficult because they have special meanings (you cannot guess that give up smoking means stop smoking even if you know the words give and up).

If you want to find a phrasal verb in the dictionary, look under the first word (to find give up, look under give). The 'phrasal verbs' section comes after the ordinary meanings of the verb.

Practice 1

Use the dictionary to complete these sentences with the correct word.

- a) This meat smells horrible. It must have gone .....
(over, off, past)
- b) UK stands ..... United Kingdom.
(out, to, for)
- c) I can't work ..... how to use this video.
(up, out, for)
- d) Sue came ..... the letter while she was tidying her room.
(to, across, for)
- e) I'm sure that story wasn't true. I think Pete made it .....
(up, for, in)
- f) She was offered a job in London, but she decided to turn it .....
(over, up, down)
- g) Oh no, I've run out ..... milk. We'll have to buy some more.
(for, of, with)
- h) Can you write ..... your address and telephone number, please?
(down, up, in)

Now turn the page upside down and check your answers.

The four types

There are four main types of phrasal verbs:

1 Phrasal verbs without an object

The fire went out.

My car broke down on the motorway.

In the dictionary these verbs are written like this:

go out    break down

2 Phrasal verbs that can be separated by an object

- a) If the object is a noun, it can either go after both parts of the phrasal verb, or between them:

She tried on the red dress.

She tried the red dress on.

- b) If the object is a pronoun, it must go between the two parts of the phrasal verb:

She tried it on.

(NOT ~~She tried on it.~~)

In the dictionary this verb is written like this: try sth on. When you see sth or sb between the two parts of the phrasal verb, you know that they can be separated by an object.

3 Phrasal verbs that cannot be separated by an object

The two parts of the phrasal verb must go together:

John's looking after the children.

(NOT ~~John's looking the children after.~~)

John's looking after them.

(NOT ~~John's looking them after.~~)

In the dictionary this verb is written like this: look after sb. When you see sb or sth after the two parts of the phrasal verb, you know that they cannot be separated by an object.

4 Phrasal verbs with three parts

The three parts of the phrasal verb must go together:

I can't put up with this noise any longer.

In the dictionary this verb is written like this: put up with sb/sth. Again, when you see sb or sth after the three parts of the phrasal verb, you know that they cannot be separated by an object.

Practice 2

Complete these sentences by putting the word it in the correct place.
In each sentence you will have to leave one space empty.

- You must be hot with your coat on. Why don't you take ..... off .....
- If you don't understand this word, look ..... up ..... in your dictionary.
- He's had a big shock, and it will take him some time to get ..... over .....
- I was going to do my homework last night, but I'm afraid I didn't get round ..... to .....
- I thought you'd read the newspaper, so I threw ..... away .....
- Jill can't come to the meeting tomorrow, so we'll have to put ..... off ..... till next week.

Now turn the page upside down and check your answers.

a) take it off. b) look it up. c) get over it. d) round to it. e) threw it away. f) put it off.

Punctuation

A full stop (.) (US period)

is used at the end of a sentence, unless the sentence is a question or an exclamation:

*We're leaving now.
That's all.
Thank you.*

It is also often used after an abbreviation:

*Acacia Ave. a.m.
Walton St.*

A question mark (?) is written

at the end of a direct question:

'Who's that man?' Jenny asked.

but not after an indirect question:

Jenny asked who the man was.

An exclamation mark (!)

(US exclamation point) is used at the end of a sentence which expresses surprise, enthusiasm, shock or horror:

*What an amazing story!
How well you look!
Oh no! The cat's been run over!*

or after an interjection or a word describing a loud sound:

*Bye!
Ow!
Crash!*

A comma (,) shows a slight pause in a sentence:

*I ran all the way to the station,
but I still missed the train.*

Although it was cold, the sun was shining.

He did, nevertheless, leave his phone number.

However, we may be wrong.

It is also used before a quotation or direct speech:

Fiona said, 'I'll help you.'

'I'll help you', said Fiona, 'but you'll have to wait till Monday.'

Commas are also used between the items in a list, although they may be omitted before and:

It was a cold, rainy day.

This shop sells records, tapes and compact discs.

In relative clauses, commas are used around a phrase which adds some new, but not essential, information.

Compare the two sentences:

The boy who had lots of sweets gave some to the boy who had none.

The boy, who had lots of sweets, was already eating.

We cannot understand the first sentence without the information introduced by who. However, in the second sentence, the phrase who had lots of sweets only adds extra information and is kept separate from the main part of the sentence by commas.

A colon (:) is used to introduce something, such as a long quotation or a list:

*There is a choice of main course:
roast beef, turkey or omelette.*

A semicolon (;) is used to separate two contrasting parts of a sentence:

John wanted to go; I did not.

or to separate items in a list where commas have already been used:

The school uniform consists of navy skirt or trousers; grey, white or pale blue shirt; navy jumper or cardigan; grey, blue or white socks.

An apostrophe (') shows either that a letter is missing, in short forms such as:

hasn't, don't, I'm, he's or that a person or thing belongs to somebody:

*Peter's scarf
Jane's mother
my friend's car*

With some names that end in s, another s is not always added:

Charles' book

Notice the position of the apostrophe with singular and plural nouns:

the girl's keys
(= the keys belonging to the girl)
the girls' keys
(= the keys belonging to the girls)

Quotation marks or inverted commas (' ' or " ") are used to show the words that somebody said:

*'Come and see,' said Martin.
'Oh, no!' said Martin. 'Come and see what's happened.'
Angela shouted, 'Over here!'*

or what somebody thought, when the thoughts are presented like speech:

'Will they get here on time?' she wondered.

They are also used around a title, eg of a book, play, film, etc:

*'Pinocchio' was the first film I ever saw.
'Have you read "Emma"?' he asked.*

A hyphen (-) is used to join two words which together form one idea:

*the dining-room
a ten-ton truck*

or sometimes to link a prefix to a word:

non-violent anti-British and in compound numbers:

thirty-four seventy-nine

You also write a hyphen at the end of a line if you have to divide a word and write part of it on the next line.

A dash (—) can be used to separate a phrase from the rest of a sentence. It can be used near the end of the sentence before a phrase which sums up the rest of the sentence:

The burglars had taken the furniture, the TV and stereo, the paintings — absolutely everything.

or you can put a dash at the beginning and the end of a phrase which adds extra information:

A few people — not more than ten — had already arrived.

A dash can also show that the speaker has been interrupted in the middle of a sentence:

'Have you seen —' 'Look out!' she screamed as the ball flew towards them.

Brackets ( ) (or especially in US English, parentheses) are also used to keep extra information separate from the rest of the sentence:

Two of the runners (Johns and Smith) finished the race in under an hour.

Numbers or letters used in sentences may also have a bracket after them or brackets around them:

The camera has three main advantages: 1) its compact size 2) its low price and 3) the quality of the photographs.

What would you do if you won a lot of money?

- (a) save it*
- (b) travel round the world*
- (c) buy a new house*
- (d) buy presents for your friends*

- 1 If you don't know the name of the person you're writing to, begin with Dear Sir or Madam
and finish with Yours faithfully
(Sincerely in American English).
- 2 If you know the name of the person you're writing to,
begin with Dear Mr Roberts
Dear Ms Cooper
Dear Mrs Williams
Dear Miss Thomas
and finish with Yours sincerely
(Sincerely in American English).
- 3 The letter should be written in a formal style, so you should not use contractions. Write: I am and do not, NOT ~~I'm~~ and ~~don't~~.

Informal letters

17 South Street Carlisle Cumbria CA2 6MG	}	your address but NOT your name
Tuesday 11th June	}	the date
Dear Clare
Thanks very much for your letter. It was lovely to hear from you. I'm glad you're enjoying your new job and that you like Bristol. It's nice that the people at work are so friendly.	}	introduction
We're all missing you here in Carlisle! Bob and Hilary had a party last weekend and everyone was asking how you were. It was a good party, although I didn't get home till five in the morning so I spent most of Sunday in bed!
I don't know what the weather's been like in Bristol but it's been really hot here this week. I hope it stays like this as Helen and I are planning to go camping in Scotland at the end of the month. It won't be much fun if it rains!
Well, no more news for the moment, but I'll write again soon.	}	conclusion
Love Nick

- 1 If you know the person you're writing to very well, you can finish with Love
or Lots of love.

If you don't want to be quite so informal,
you can finish with Best wishes
or With best wishes.

- 2 The style of this letter is informal, so the writer uses lots of contractions: it's, we're, didn't, etc.

The Arab World

Countries

- 1 Some countries in the Arab world have names in English that come directly from their Arabic names. Their pronunciation in English is, however, often very different from the way they are pronounced in Arabic.

Arabic	English	Pronunciation
البحرين	Bahrain	/bə'rein/
العراق	Iraq	/i'ra:k/
الكويت	Kuwait	/ku'wert/
ليبيا	Libya	/'libiə/
عمان	Oman	/əu'mɑ:n/
قطر	Qatar	/'kʌtɑ:(r)/
السودان	Sudan	/su'dɑ:n; US -'dæn/
اليمن	Yemen	/'jemən/

- 2 Other countries have English names that are different from their names in Arabic.

The regions of the world where Arabs live are known as the Middle East (eg Egypt, Iraq, Jordan) and North Africa (eg Algeria, Libya, Morocco).

Arabic	English	Pronunciation
الجزائر	Algeria	/æl'dʒɪəriə/
مصر	Egypt	/'i:dzɪpt/
الأردن	Jordan	/'dʒɔ:dn/
لبنان	Lebanon	/'lebənən; US -nən/
المغرب	Morocco	/mə'rɒkəʊ/
المملكة العربية السعودية	Saudi Arabia	/ˌsaudi ə'reɪbiə/
الصومال	Somalia	/sə'mɑ:liə/
سوريا	Syria	/'sɪriə/
تونس	Tunisia	/tju'nɪziə; US tu'ni:zə/
الإمارات العربية المتحدة	United Arab Emirates	/juˌnaɪtɪd ærəb 'emɪrəts/

Cities

- 3 Similarly, some cities have the same name in Arabic and English.

Arabic	English	Pronunciation
أبو ظبي	Abu Dhabi	/ˌæbu 'dɑ:bi/
عمان	Amman	/ə'mɑ:n/
بغداد	Baghdad	/bæg'dæd/
بيروت	Beirut	/bei'ru:t/
دبي	Dubai	/d(j)u'baɪ/
جدة	Jiddah	/'dʒɪdə/
الخرطوم	Khartoum	/kɑ:'tu:m/
مكة	Mecca	/'mekə/
مقديشو	Mogadishu	/ˌmɒgə'dɪʃu/
مسقط	Muscat	/'mʌskæt/
الرباط	Rabat	/rə'bæt/
الرياض	Riyadh	/ri'jæd; 'ri:ɑ:d/
تونس	Tunis	/'tju:nɪs/

- 4 Other cities have a different name in English.

Arabic	English	Pronunciation
الجزائر	Algiers	/æl'dʒɪəz/
حلب	Aleppo	/æ'lepəʊ/
الاسكندرية	Alexandria	/ˌælgɪ'zɑ:ndriə/
القاهرة	Cairo	/'kaɪrəʊ/
الدار البيضاء	Casablanca	/ˌkæsoʊ'blæŋkə/
دمشق	Damascus	/də'mɑ:skəs; -'mæskəs/
القدس	Jerusalem	/dʒə'ru:sələm/
الكويت	Kuwait City	/ku'wert 'sɪti/
طرابلس	Tripoli	/'trɪpəli/

Nationalities

- 5 The adjectives used to describe nationality in English have a variety of endings, for example:

He is Egyptian. She is Lebanese. They are Iraqi.

Often the adjective can also be used as a noun to refer to a person from the relevant country:

(adjective) an Egyptian tradition

(noun) She is an Egyptian living in London.

This is the case with all the nationality words for countries of the Arab world. As a contrast, look at the following cases where different words are needed for the adjective and noun:

He is English. He is an Englishman.

She is French. She is a Frenchwoman.

the Polish Government some Poles on holiday

a Spanish restaurant a Spaniard from Madrid

Following is a table of nationality words for some countries of the Arab world:

Country	Nationality (adjective and noun)	Pronunciation
Algeria	Algerian	/æ'l dʒɜəriən/
Bahrain	Bahraini	/bə'reini/
Egypt	Egyptian	/i'dʒɪpʃn/
Iraq	Iraqi	/i'ra:ki/
Jordan	Jordanian	/dʒɔ:'deɪniən/
Kuwait	Kuwaiti	/ku'weɪti/
Lebanon	Lebanese [The plural doesn't change.]	/,lebə'ni:z/
Libya	Libyan	/'lɪbiən/
Morocco	Moroccan	/mə'rəkən/
Oman	Omani	/əu'mɑ:ni/
Qatar	Qatari	/kʌ'tɑ:ri/
Saudi Arabia	Saudi (Arabian)	/,saʊdi (ə'reɪbiən)/
Somalia	Somali	/sə'mɑ:li/
Sudan	Sudanese [The plural doesn't change.]	/,su:də'ni:z/
Syria	Syrian	/'sɪriən/
Tunisia	Tunisian	/tju'nɪziən; US tu'ni:ʒn/
Yemen	Yemeni	/'jeməni/

Geographical features

- 6 Following are some of the rivers, seas, mountains, etc of the Arab world with their English names:

Arabic	English	Pronunciation
البحر الميت	the Dead Sea	/ðə 'ded 'si:/
البحر الأحمر	the Red Sea	/ðə 'red 'si:/
البحر الأبيض المتوسط	the Mediterranean Sea	/ðə 'medɪtə'reɪniən 'si:/
الخليج	The Gulf	/ðə 'gʌlf/
قناة السويس	the Suez Canal	/ðə 'su:ɪz kə'næl/
نهر النيل	the River Nile	/ðə 'rɪvə 'naɪəl/
نهر دجلة	the River Tigris	/ðə 'rɪvə 'taɪgrɪs/
نهر الفرات	the River Euphrates	/ðə 'rɪvə ju'fretɪz/
مضيق جبل طارق	the Strait of Gibraltar	/ðə 'streɪt əv dʒɪ'brɔ:ltə(r)/
شبه الجزيرة العربية	the Arabian Peninsula	/ði ə'reɪbiən pə'nɪnsjələ; US -sələ/
شبه جزيرة سيناء	Sinai (also the Sinai peninsula)	/(ðə) 'sainai (pə'nɪnsjələ; US -sələ)/
الصحراء الكبرى	the Sahara (Desert)	/ðə sə'hɑ:rə ('dezət)/
جبل موسى، جبل الطور	Mount Sinai	/'maʊnt 'sainai/

Appendix 11

Pronunciation

Pronunciation

If two pronunciations for one word are given, both are acceptable. The first form is considered to be more common. A word that is pronounced very differently in American English has the American pronunciation given after a US label:

address /ə'dres; US 'ædres/

/-/ A hyphen is used in alternative pronunciations when only part of the pronunciation changes. The part that remains the same is replaced by a hyphen:

attitude /'ætɪtju:d; US -tʊd/

/' This mark shows that the syllable after it is said with more force (stress) than the other syllables in the word or group of words. For example, any /'eni/ has a stress on the first syllable; depend /drɪ'pend/ has a stress on the second syllable.

/,/ This mark shows that a syllable is said with more force than other syllables in a word but with a stress that is not as strong as for those syllables marked '/'. So in the word pronunciation /prəˌnʌnsi'eɪʃn/ the main stress is on the syllable /'eɪ/ and the secondary stress is on the syllable /,nʌn/.

(r) In spoken British English an r at the end of a written word (either as the final letter or in an -re ending as in fire) is not sounded unless another word that begins with a vowel sound follows. For example, the r is not heard in His car was sold, but it is heard in His car isn't old. To show this, words which end in r or re have (r) at the end of the phonetic spelling in the dictionary: car /kɑ:(r)/

In American English the /r/ is sounded whenever it occurs in the spelling of a word.

Strong and weak forms

Some very common words, eg an, as, that, of have two or more pronunciations: a strong form and one or more weak forms. In speech the weak forms are more common. For example, from is /frəm/ in He comes from Spain. The strong form occurs when the word comes at the end of a sentence or it is given special emphasis. For example, from is /frɒm/ in The present's not 'from John, it's 'for him.

Pronunciation in derivatives and compounds

Many derivatives are formed by adding a suffix at the end of a word. These are pronounced by simply saying the suffix after the word. For example, slowly /'sləʊli/ is said by joining the suffix -ly /li/ to the word slow /sləʊ/.

However, where there is doubt about how a derivative is pronounced, the phonetic spelling is given. The part that remains the same is represented by a hyphen:

mournful /-fl/; mournfully /-fəli/

In compounds (made up of two or more words) the pronunciation of the individual words is not repeated. The dictionary shows how the compound is stressed by using the marks '/' and '/,/'. In 'bus-stop the stress is on the first word. In ˌjacket po'tato the secondary stress is on the first syllable of jacket and the main stress is on the second syllable of potato.
